

VTA is here for you – even in these difficult times!

Ing. Dr. h. c. Ulrich Kubinger
Founder and CEO
VTA Group

Ladies and gentlemen, valued partners and friends of VTA!

We are all experiencing a situation at present that just a few days ago seemed utterly unthinkable. Our daily routines and our lives have changed completely. Quite apart from its health consequences, the economic impact of COVID-19 is dramatic. In this extraordinary situation, it is important for us to inform you that:

VTA is operating as usual and is here for you. We can continue to deliver any VTA product you require – at any time and in the quantities you need. Efficient production locations and extensive storage capacities in several Central European countries ensure an uninterrupted supply.

At the same time, we will continue to offer our technical on-site support where possible within the framework of the government regulations currently in place. We will of course also ensure strict compliance with these government regulations and with the guidelines of the Robert Koch Institute, as we do with all processes within our company.

Dedicated commitment and support for our thousands of customers, partners and friends: for us, this is not only an obligation in these challenging times, but a genuine ambition. We can do this, and we are doing it.

I wish you and your families all the best and look forward to our future together, in good health and with all of the personal encounters we are now missing. A future in which clean water and a healthy environment will be more important than ever. That's why we at VTA are giving everything we've got – even now, and especially now.

Sincerely,

Ing. Dr. h. c. Ulrich Kubinger